Dear Professor Canning:

It was a pleasure hosting your students on 1 December 1978.

I am enclosing a comprehensive compilation of unclassified Agency publications. This should give you an indication of the varied type of research that is underway at the National Foreign Assessment Center. Also enclosed are some recent unclassified research and reference works. I hope you find them useful. Look forward to meeting you again.

Sincerely,

Associate Coordinator for

Dear Mr. [redacted]

Thank you very much for arranging the briefings on contemporary China and Japan we received last Friday. The students in my class and Mr. Kim's were deeply impressed by the quality of the presentations by Ms. [redacted]. We hope you will convey our appreciation to them.

STATINTL

The chance to visit the Central Intelligence Agency, to meet some of the people who work there, and to discuss current issues such as the wallposter campaign in China and the LDP election in Japan is rare, and in my estimation it provided a valuable educational opportunity for our students. I want to thank you and the others for making it possible.

Sincerely yours,

STATINTL

Dear Mr. [redacted]

Thank you very much for the telephone call on October 31. As we discussed, Professor Chonghan Kim and I would like to bring our classes, Governments and Politics of China and Japan (Government 336; Professor Kim) and Modern Japanese History (History 483; Professor Canning), to the C.I.A. on Friday, December 1 at 3:00 p.m. for a briefing and discussion from 3:30 to 5:00 p.m. If it can be arranged, we would like to concentrate on contemporary China and Japan, especially political and economic issues. Students in both classes will have some familiarity with modern East Asian history, but I'm sure they would welcome a brief discussion of background to recent events before concentrating on contemporary issues. Also, I feel confident that the students would be fascinated to learn something about the C.I.A. itself and how the agency approaches the study of East Asia, if this is a permissible topic for discussion.

As you requested, I am enclosing a list of all participants on the field trip, including Professor Kim, myself and my wife.

Thank you very much for your cooperation.

Sincerely yours,

Craig N. Canning
